DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Philip Pry House is now part of the Antietam Battlefield National Park. Since the house was photographed in 1976, it has been damaged by a fire which destroyed the front porch and some woodwork. A two story, five bay brick structure, the house is dated on a brick beside the front door which is marked Philip Pry, July 1844. The house exhibits characteristics associated with the 1840's period in Washington County such as wide wooden lintels over the windows, an entrance which includes a broad transom and side lights, and the use of Flemish bond brick work at the front elevation only. The house roof utilizes a combination of hipped and gabled structures. Interior woodwork is also indicative of the mid 19th century period.

SPECIFIC DATES Philip Pry, July 1844 BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Philip Pry house is most notably significant for its association with the Civil War Battle of Antietam. Although not situated on the actual field of battle, the house which stands on a high hill commands a view of the battle area and was used as headquarters of General McClellan, Commander of the Union Forces.

Architecturally the house displays the mid 19th century Greek Revival influence
